Budget as a Communications Tool

- From reading the budget, the public should be able to tell what functions a government is performing and how many resources have been allocated to those functions.
- It codifies the policy decisions so that managers have a reference when making operational decisions.

Why do governments budget?

- It's the law
 - Required by state law or charters
 - Without a budget, there are no appropriations and staff cannot spend funds
- Establishes key financial policies
 - Define balanced budget
 - Sets prudent reserve levels
 - Sets rates and fees
 - Revenue and debt policies
 - Operational and capital expenditure policies

Where does the money come from?

- Across Colorado there are some common types of revenue similar types of local governments tend to collect
- At the same time, there are also other uncommon, one-off, and illegal types of revenue local governments can't collect
- A very important part of the budget process is the development of revenue projections and the evaluation of these projections on a reoccurring timeframe.

(so you can see how projections hold up)

Leaders may want to consider Budget and Financial Policies

- Establishing budget and other financial policies codify expected practices within your local government.
- The National Advisory Council on State and Local Budget (NACSLB) has developed recommended practices to follow:
 - Establish Broad Goals to guide Decision Making
 - Develop Approaches to Achieve Goals
 - Develop a Budget consistent with Approaches
 - Evaluate Performance and Make Adjustments
- Some Common Types of Policies include:
 - Balanced Budget Policy
 - Fund Balance Policy
 - Fee and Charge Policy
 - One-time Revenue Policy
 - Fund Transfer Policy
 - Unpredictable Revenue Policy
 - Debt Issuance Policy
 - Operation vs. Capital Expenditure Policy
